State and Nation in Co-operative Movement

(Herald Special Service)
PORTLAND, June 10.—Announcement is made by the forest service at Portland that a co-operative agreement dealing with the use and development of the water power resources of the state of Oregon has just been completed between State Engineer John H. Lewis and the Secretary of Agriculture.

The purposes of this agreement are fully stated in the preamble, which reads as follows:
"In order to insure co-operation and uniform action, to avoid duplication of work and expense, to make available to both the data secured and the action taken by each, and to facilitate the approval of applications for water rights for the occupancy and use of national forest lands within the state of Oregon for the development of water power, the Secretary of the United States Department of Agriculture and the state engineer of the state of Oregon do make and subscribe to the following co-operative agreement."

Moving Pictures

Inimitable, beloved Mary Pickford's latest characterization is that of the little actress in the well known play of theatrical life, "Behind the Scenes," by Margaret Mayo.

This is the picture attraction that will be presented at the Star theater today.

Not since "In the Bishop's Carriage" has this fascinating star appeared in the role of an actress, and her wonderful success in the other production augurs a similar or greater triumph in the present play.

"Behind the Scenes" is an absorbing play that contrasts the drama of life with the glamor of the stage. It is human throughout, and depicts the struggle and sorrows of the little sourette for theatrical fame, her great sacrifice for love just when success is within reach.

The humorous elements and serious episodes of the drama are faithfully interpreted by Miss Pickford and punctuated with her delightful and original methods. When the stress of the play reaches its crisis—when the little actress, after years of struggle and poverty, is forced to choose between love and success, the star reaches unusual dramatic heights, and gives one of the best performances of her brilliant career. After the great inner battle, she abandons the stage for the man she loves, but the real cost of her decision is plainly written on her expressive face and the sacrifice is intensified by her evident and pathetic longing for the life of the stage.

"Behind the scenes" is a story of stage life not exaggerated, not dressed with the clothes of imagination, but true and sincere in its depiction of the miserable failures and the thrilling successes of a theatrical career. And against this entrancing element is balanced the overwhelming love of a man, triumphant in this case as it has been throughout many other soul conflicts. This feature is in five parts. A Hearst Selling News Pictorial will be shown in addition to the feature.

A Shoe for a Purpose

THERE are Regal Styles as sober looking as a judge and Regal Styles as lively as the fleeting moment.

Custom and convention ordain the essentials of boot etiquette. It is in the incidentals of toe, tip, arch, shank and heel that one may give rein to personal taste and stand aloof from the mere "unit in the census." A Regal is not just correct in design, but correct to a hair's-breadth in detail.
